Fast track the time and effort needed to manage a food pantry by creating a way for the community to request food at the pantry. With Customer and Visitor Management, Managing Volunteers and Events, and Custom Activity Reports, you have the ability to create a free tool that will enable the management of the whole food pantry experience. Food Fort has managed to unify the food donations that the community brings in, and put them into a central database. This application makes it easy to send the food to different outlets, from food banks to restaurants. In addition to food, the app can also manage inventory, and manage volunteers. Vendio is an app designed to collect and organize all of the members of the public who have made food donations at the The Salvation Army food pantry in Bedford, New York. This application can also manage inventory, volunteers, events and create custom activity reports. Flour Works is a food donations app that allows your members to donate directly to Flour Works using their credit cards. Flour Works then will create vouchers for food donations and then will distribute the food vouchers to their partner food pantries in the community. FoodShare is an app that allows you to manage your food pantry and have it track all donations and their origins. FoodShare is also able to hold events, issue, work, and more. Grub Aid is a free mobile application that allows you to collect food donations and track your donations. Grub Aid will also manage your volunteer, as well as your events. First United Methodist Church Food Pantry is an app that allows you to record food donations and manage the events and volunteers associated with the food pantry. McFarland Community Food Pantry is a lightweight, yet handy application designed to help you manage the customers, visits, volunteers at a community food pantry. McFarland Community Food Pantry can keep track of the food records, volunteers and events, as well as generate custom activity reports for donations or volunteering hours.
