A: The original "Director" version is still available for Windows - you can get it from www.biesse.com. A listing of the ISOs that were provided for BiesseWorks at various times can be found here - They are for machines running Win9x (i.e. Windows NT 4.0 - available from Install. Enter "BiesseWorks Main Menu" (Shift+F1) and click "Install from Local Disk" Directors have the option of automatically starting when the PC starts and calling up the "Kernel Loader". The "Kernel Loader" is the program that checks the device initialization code of the loadable Biesse machine, checks the signature of the kernel (which has changed from the "8081a64401" to "85F3") and then loads the correct kernel for that version of Biesse. The menus available are: "BiesseWorks Main Menu" "BiesseWorks BiesseKernelLoader" If the "Kernel Loader" is not visible use the "BiesseWorks Main Menu" to access the "Kernel Loader". A: Other answers describe the free Director (also available here). This post describes the free Editor (also available here). There are useful hyperlinks at the end of the web site.
